

Train Conductor, listed in Apple's "Highly Addictive Games", receives a new level: The Barossa Valley.

The critically acclaimed Train Conductor just got bigger. Insatiable fans have been delivered a brand new level set in the heart of Australia's great wine region, The Barossa Valley. Recently featured on Apple's "Highly Addictive Games" list and named as "Game of the Year 2009" by DIYGamer, Train Conductor is now a rare 'must have' for the iPhone and iPod Touch.

 12th May 2010 - Melbourne, Australia

The new level features the relentless challenge of two opposing train systems which threaten to spoil the peace and quiet of a Barossa Valley vineyard. The region needs a skilled train conductor to ensure the freshly harvested grapes can be processed into wine and delivered to market on time.

Various gameplay innovations include the addition of empty transport trains that don't need to be rerouted, but that can make life difficult if not managed correctly. The new gameplay elements present a unique experience to Train Conductor fans that builds upon the existing game.

Responding to player feedback, this update includes an improved HUD layout that enables players to better access the fast forward and pause buttons.

The Voxel Agents are continuing to add more content to the game and are working hard to create more levels that explore great locations around Australia and the world.
